Wainwright Drop Two Games to Neilburg

FOUR EXTRA INNINGS PLAYED TO DECIDE SECOND GAME

On Wednesday afternoon last the local ball team journeyed over to Neilburg and lost out in a very close game by a 3-1 score. Neilburg scored two runs in the first inning, directly due to two errors, which two runs proved to be the deciding factor of the game. Both teams earned one run each from then on making the final count read 3-1.

NEILBURG 4—WAIN. 2

In a snappy exhibition of baseball the locals lost out to Neilburg in a long drawn-out game, which went four extra innings, finally ending up with the locals on the short end of a 4-2 count.

Wainwright used three pitchers during the game with "Barney" Buckle starting the game; he was relieved by Sam Roberts in the seventh inning. The Neilburg batsmen took a liking to Sam's offerings in the 13th inning and belted out three singles in succession and he was replaced by Harry Murray, who finished the game. Flohr did the mound work for the Neilburg boys with Pitinger catching.

Due to two singles and an error the Neilburg team took a two-run lead in the first inning, which was all the scoring they did until the 13th frame.

Phil Stuart cut their lead in half in the second inning by scoring on Russell Cofield's single after getting to first on a walk. It looked as if the stage was set for Wainwright to score in the fifth inning when Russell Cofield, first man to bat got a two-base hit, the longest hit of the game, and was advanced to third by E. Lane's single; but Flohr, the Neilburg chucker, went to work and struck out two men and the third flying out, the second baseman making the catch.

Wainwright tied things up in the seventh inning, Russell Cofield scoring. He reached first on a single and scored with the help of an error.

With the score deadlocked at the end of the official nine innings, extra innings were played and it was not until the 13th inning that the tie was broken. Neilburg scored two runs when Roberts was touched for three singles in a row. Wainwright were unable to enter the scoring column in their turn at bat in the 13th inning ending the game 4-2.

George Clark handled the game.

On Sunday afternoon next at two and five o'clock respectively, a ball club from Kitscoty will tangle with the locals here. Wainwright met this club in Vermilion on the 24th of May, and the game ran into extra innings before the winner was declared; so the fans are assured of two good games.

JOINING UP HIGHWAY TO CROSS CANADA

WINNIPEG—Formal opening on Dominion Day—July 1—of 452 miles of gravelled road between Winnipeg and the twin cities of Port Arthur and Fort William at the head of the Great Lakes marked a long step forward for the Trans-Canada Highway, long a vision of the future for Canadian motorists and now rapidly approaching completion.

Motorists now actually may cross the Dominion without dipping south into the United States, by using car ferries for 125 miles east of Port William and by bridging a short gap in the Rocky Mountains through transporting their cars on freight trains.

Harvesting Started Says Crop Report

Harvesting of grain has begun in the Prairie Provinces and will be general within from ten days to two weeks. In Manitoba and eastern Saskatchewan the severe damage done to the wheat crop by rust is becoming increasingly apparent. In most areas of Alberta crops are progressing favourably. In Quebec favorable weather has maintained the progress of the previously reported good grain and root crops and pasturage is abundant. In western and southern Ontario harvesting of grain has been delayed by frequent rains but throughout the Province a large hay crop has been saved despite the showery weather. Most other crops are doing well. In the Maritime conditions are somewhat patchy. The hay harvest has been completed and grains are ripening fast. In British Columbia warm settled weather following heavy rains is benefiting crops generally and a good yield of grain is anticipated.

Alberta

Crops are maturing satisfactorily but are late in the northern and central areas and cutting will not be general for two weeks. Prospects continue favourable except in the south where light returns are indicated. The beet crop is an average one.

Saskatchewan

Crops are ripening rapidly and cutting will be well under way within a week. Rust infection continues to spread and damage to the wheat crop will be heavy in the southwest and east central areas. Drought has taken heavy toll in the western and northern areas. Coarse grains are patchy but feed will be sufficient in most districts.

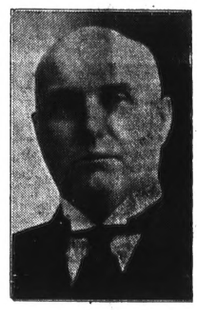

Manitoba

Wheat cutting is fairly general but owing to the damage from rust the crop will be light and of poor grade. A fair yield of coarse grains is expected, although they also have been affected by rust and lodging. Hay is plentiful.

Political Parties Hold Final Meet

During the past week politicians of all parties have been busy holding their final meetings throughout the constituency, with a major wind-up gathering in Wainwright.

On Wednesday last Premier Reid was the attraction at the theatre when he spoke to a large number on the record of the U.F.A. government. Dr. H. L. Coursier, the U.F.A.-C.C.F. candidate, as well as Mr. Lloyd Reynolds also addressed the meeting. Mr. Arthurs was chairman.

Friday evening saw a meeting at the Masonic hall in the interests of Mr. R. Smallwood, the Conservative candidate in this division. He spoke on the platform of that party, as did also Mr. J. Ogilvie, of Edmonton, Mr. J. W. Stuart being in the chair.

The Social Credit party had the Masonic hall filled on Monday evening, when on behalf of Mr. W. Mason the candidate, other speakers expressed their views on the issues of the day. Mr. Wright was chairman.

And tonight (Wednesday) the theatre will no doubt be the rendevous of a large number to hear Mr. G. G. (Gerry) McGeer, M.L.A. He will speak in the interests of Mr. Peter Milne, the Liberal candidate, who will also address the meeting and explain the policies and platform of the party he is representing. Mr. W. A. Knowles will act as chairman of the meeting.

How To Make Your Ballot Count

As the voting for the provincial legislature tomorrow (Thursday) will be counted on the transferable vote system for rural polls, the following information taken from the "Election Act" should prove of interest:

The deputy returning officer in making the count at the close of the poll shall reject any ballot papers

(a) which have not been supplied by him, or
(b) on which a cross or X is marked, or
(c) on which the figure "1" standing alone indicating a first preference is marked for more than one candidate, or
(e) on which the figure "1" standing alone indicating a first preference and some other figure are marked for the same candidate, or
(f) on which there is any writing or mark by which the voter can be indentified.

Mark your ballot only with the figures "1" "2" "3" and "4" in the order of your choice of candidates—and NOTHING MORE.

MARRIAGE

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Cummings, of Heath, wish to announce the marriage of their youngest daughter, Jean Oliwen, to Morton Herbert, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Herbert, of Heath, on Wednesday, August 14th.

New Canadian Wheat Bd. Work Voluntary Basis

OTTAWA — Government legislation before Parliament at the recent session proposed at first to set up a board that would have control of the marketing of all wheat produced in Canada. In the face of strong objections from many quarters the bill was amended. It was passed without the feature of compulsion, and the board will co-operate with existing marketing agencies.

The new board of three members will deal with wheat only. It will set a fixed minimum price which producers will receive for their wheat; it will take all the wheat that is offered; but producers have the alternative of selling through existing channels if they so prefer. The Winnipeg Grain Exchange will continue to operate as in the past.

Four New Cabinet Ministers Appointed Before Dissolution

OTTAWA — Four Conservative members entered the cabinet of Premier Bennett Wednesday in a general pre-election reorganization.

G. R. Geary, Toronto, became minister of justice, succeeding Hon. Hugh Guthrie, who was appointed chairman of the board of railway commissioners.

J. E. Lawson, Toronto, became minister of national revenue, succeeding Hon. R. C. Matthews, who is leaving public life.

William Ernst, Lunenburg, N.S., was appointed minister of fisheries, a post vacant for some time.

Samuel Gobeil, Compton, Que., was made minister without portfolio.

The four took the oath of office before the governor-general. A few minutes later, they attended their first cabinet meeting.

Interest Shown By Increased Advance Poll

At the advanced poll which was held in Wainwright last week end, a decided increase in the number of early voters was shown by the larger number of ballots issued by deputy returning officer F. Dickins than has ever been called for before in this instance; thus pointing to a greatly increased total in the final polling for the constituency.

Thanksgiving Day Set for October 24

OTTAWA—Because election day has been set for October 14, Thanksgiving Day has been advanced to October 24th, it was announced Wednesday by Premier R. B. Bennett. In most ridings nomination day will be October 7.

300 Candidates For Sixty-Three Seats

Almost double the number of candidates that contested the 1930 election will be voted upon at the elections tomorrow (Thursday). Five years ago 165 were nominated; this year it is expected approximately 300 will contest for the 63 legislative seats.

The Alberta Social Credit League, under the leadership of William Aberhart, contesting its first election will have the largest group of candidates.

Final nomination reports show the following line-up of candidates:

Social Credit	63
U.F.A.	61
Liberals	61
Conservatives	55

The remainder being divided among Independents, Douglas Social Credit and Socialist candidates.

Premier R. G. Reid and all members of his cabinet with one exception—Hon. Irene Parlby—are seeking re-election.

D. M. Duggan, provincial Conservative leader, and W. R. Howson, head of the provincial Liberal party, are again running for Edmonton seats. F. C. Moyer, of Drumheller, heads the Independent group.

William Aberhart, leader of the Social Credit forces, will not be a candidate, but if his party is successful he will assume the premiership. A bye-election would be arranged to provide a seat for him.

Calgary has a score of candidates representing all major parties, while Edmonton nominated 27. Both are six-member ridings.

New Detail Housing Act Made Public

OTAWA—Under the Dominion housing act it will be possible to build a $5,000 home with an initial capital of $1,000 and pay off the balance at a rate of $26.40 per month in 20 years, according to further details of the act made public Friday by finance minister E. N. Rhodes.

Interest charges will be at a maximum rate of five per cent and losses that may occur will be divided as between the government and the lending institution. If at the time a loss occurs the amount owing under the mortgage is above the advance by the lending institution, that body will bear two-thirds and the government one-third.

For the construction of a single dwelling or a larger building to be used for residences only, the government and approved lending institution will advance 60 per cent of the loan and the government 20 per cent.

Contracts under which the government and the lending companies will operate have been distributed and when finally signed the act will be in operation and ready for applications. Prospective builders will apply direct to lending companies. The government will receive only three per cent on its money and the contract will provide that not more than five per cent is charged the borrower.

Employees Number 10p.c. Shareholders

Distribution of 208,528 shares of Imperial Oil Ltd., with a market value exceeding $4,000,000 has been made within the past few days to 3,557 of the company's employees in Canada. Some of these shares went into practically every community in the country and a list of the occupations of the employees who received them would be almost endless.

In Manitoba 3,458 shares were distributed, in Saskatchewan 13,170, and in Alberta 21,849.

The employees acquired this stock over a period of three years through the Company's Fourth Co-operative Investment Trust. Due to the company's contribution and appreciation in the value of the stock the employees actually paid only about $1,600,000. G. Harrison Smith, President of Imperial Oil, commenting on this distribution said that years ago the shareholders had speculated on Canada's future by investing millions of dollars in equipment to serve consumers everywhere in Canada. As business developed the importance of maintaining a personal touch with the consumer and of promoting industry and enterprise became increasingly evident and so the plan of making employees part owners of the business was devised. "It is part of a general plan relating to proper and just treatment of labor," Mr. Smith said, "and is based not only on the belief that labor is entitled to good treatment but on the knowledge that efficient and economical operation of an industry depends upon a loyal and enthusiastic personnel. In most cases," he said, "when you deal with an employee of Imperial Oil you are dealing with a part owner of the company. Of 55,000 Canadian shareholders in the company, more than 5,000 are employees."

Newspaper Film Delights Playgoers

A newspaper story plus unique romance and comedy, a hard to crack murder mystery, and all the hysteria of get-the-news no matter how, are the ingredients of which "After Office Hours", the MGM feature for Thurs., Fri., and Sat., is concocted. In addition to these entertainment assets, there is with Clark Gable a cast of more than ordinary value.

The picture moves fast. In most cases the dialogue is crisp and the action creates an atmosphere of bustle and to-do. The time is modern, the locale New York. In the story, Jim Branch is the typical screen editor. Scoops are his lifeblood and he knows and makes use of all the contacts with which to provide his readers with the latest. To him, women are just another medium through which the news may be procured.

The drama, romance and mystery are counterbalanced by the comedy of Mrs. Norwood; Hank Parr, a resourceful news cameraman, and the Italian restaurant owner with a yen for listening to the police car radio broadcasts.

The picture has much pep, with its more dramatic tensity amply balanced by comedy and romantic interest.

Self-Conducted Tours Enjoyable

Unique in the line of railway tours is one which arrived in Vancouver recently on S. S. Prince George. The party is made up of twenty-one residents of Minnesota who banded together to tour the United States and Canadian West, cheaply but comfortably. They used a colonist car on the Canadian National Railways throughout Western Canada, making their own beds and their own meals, providing their own entertainment and carrying their own transportation representative. After stopping off at Winnipeg and Jasper they continued by train to Prince Rupert where they boarded the Prince George.

Jimmy Durante Here In "Carnival"

Next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday there is real entertainment, of a down-to-earth nature, in this active and comedy-imbued yarn of a man who tries to be both father and mother to his child, in an atmosphere of carnival life. There is romance which has difficulty making its presence known because of the obtrusesness of the masculine principal. There's a baby contest, and other story aspects lend themselves to a lively show in "Carnival" which comes to the Elite for first three days next week.

Thrill and excitement are in the search for the lost baby and the fire which sweeps the carnival concessions on the midway, real comedy in the efforts of the father and his light fingered pal to learn what there is to know about the child's welfare pathos in his inability to see that his assistant at the concession is in love with him and is the ideal mother for the child.

In the lead are Lee Tracy and Sally Eilers, who make an excellent team, while Jimmy Durante, appearing in a not too dominant position and rather less excitable than ordinary provides genuine comedy and a bit of real performance now and again. Dicky Walters, youngster who plays the child is definitely appealing.

TODAY & TOMORROW

IDEALS . . . the approach

I find no essential difference between the avowed objectives of all the different groups which are striving to put their ideas into effect, all over the world. All are actuated by the same ideal, that of remaking the social and economic order so that life will be easier, or at least more bearable, for everybody.

I am certain, however, that not all of the methods by which nations are striving to reach that goal can be right. Leaving personal and party ambitions, jealousies and hatreds out of the question, some of the plans must be wrong.

My feeling is that every plan to make the world over will fail unless and until it is approached as a spiritual problem. Politics can not instil the spirit of fair play and tolerance; still less can war make for brotherly love. But social justice and economic security will be idle words, signifying nothing, until those spiritual ideals rule the world.

MONEY changes

Money and customs concerning money are constantly changing. I don't know how many local names there are for the sum represented by 12½ cents. In my boyhood it used to be called a "York Shilling;", and not many years ago I still heard rural residents of New York calculating in terms of shillings—eight to the dollar. Our "New England Shilling," on the other hand, was a sixth of a dollar—16 and two-thirds cents.

In the south, as far north as Virginia, I used to hear 12½ cents called a "levy". I do not know whether the term is still in use or not. But I hear western friends refer to the quarter as "two-bits."

I can remember when no actual coin smaller than a five cent piece circulated on the Pacific coast or in the deep south. Newspapers all sold for a nickel, and all the store prices were in multiples of five cents. A San Francisco merchant nearly caused a riot by bringing in a few tons of pennies and marking goods in odd cent prices.

COINS proposed

The Treasury is proposing to issue new kinds of money. Half-cent pieces, of copper, and one mill—a tenth of a cent—coins of aluminum may soon come into use. The need of these coins arise from the sales taxes in many states.

The suggestion of the new coins takes me back to boyhood, when many coins were common which have long-since vanished. The big copper half-cents were often seen, but commoner was the two-cent piece, made of bronze and somewhat larger than the one-cent piece. Then we had two kinds of three-cent pieces, one of nickel, about the size of a dime, and one very much smaller, made of silver. Silver five-cent pieces were in common use in the 1870's. We also used to see twenty-cent silver coins, about the size of a nickel.

It seems to me the one new coin that is most needed is a 2½ cent piece. It would find a variety of uses, especially in buying items now sold "two for a quarter."

FORESTRY up our way

Early the other morning I heard the sound of woodsmen's axes, followed by the crashing of a falling tree. In the clear mountain air the sounds carried for a long distance. What I heard was an echo, reflected from the steep side of Stockbridge Mountain. The choppers were at work two miles away, in one of Noble Turner's pine lots, on the slope of Tom Ball Mountain.

Next morning I heard the strident song of buzz-saw. Will Seeley had set up his portable saw mill and was slicing the poles into boards almost as fast as the axemen could cut them down.

Noble Turner tells me that the most profitable of all crops is trees. He owns several thousand acres of mountain pines, and gets a comfortable income with little labor.

I don't own any pine land. I wish I did.

MULES war steeds

The preparations for war in East Africa have sent up the price of American mules!

Even in these days of mechanized transport, you can't get men, guns and supplies across African deserts and mountains without the aid of the mule. So Mussolini, I learn from a friend who has been busy buying up Missouri's most famous livestock product, is collecting mules from all over the world.

I remember in the last important African war, between the British and the Boers, another friend who made a comfortable fortune by sending over several shiploads of Missouri mules to South Africa and selling them to the British army.

War anywhere in the world affects all the rest of the world.

THE PROPER CARE OF YOUR AUTOMOBILE

Fenders

THE most common mishap among motorists is of a minor nature, damage to fenders, but is one which is liable to develop into a more serious matter if neglected. When fenders become scratched or scraped they should be retouched promptly to prevent rusting, because if neglected the rust is liable to eat its way through the metal. If the fender is black, it should be finished with an enamel which dries with a color and lustre closely resembling the newly baked enamel.

Before the scraped parts are retouched the metal should be thoroughly cleaned to remove all grease, dirt and rust. If the edges of the abrasion are smoothed down with fine sandpaper or steel wool it will give a better looking job.

It is wise, also, to retouch worn spots on the tire carrier, bumper fittings, shock absorbers, and other parts which are finished in black. If you also touch up bolts and nuts which are used for installing bumpers, license plates, etc., it will be easier, to remove the nuts should they need replacement.

The Woman's Angle

While you may use rouge with a bluish-red cast in mid-winter with your furs, once your skin has been ever so lightly tanned, you'll find one of those subtle and warm yellow-orange or red-orange tints are most attractive. And powder, too, should be darker for summer use, as you've probably discovered.

Rarebit: shred a pound of American cheese, melt a tablespoon of butter, stir in 2 teaspoons of salt, 2 teaspoons dry mustard, 1 teaspoon paprika, add the cheese and stir over a low fire until melted. Stir in a half bottle of beer gradually and cook, stirring constantly until smooth. Pour over toast immediately and serve.

Occasional use of a mask is of great benefit to the skin tending to have blemishes. Try the egg mask. Separate the white and yolk of an egg, and beat each separately. After cleansing the face, spread on a layer of the white, let it dry, then a layer of the yolk and so on. Let it stay on for about twenty minutes.

Who speaks first? In Europe the man is expected to speak first when we friends meet. In the United States, it is the woman's place, as it is her place to extend her hand in greeting if she wishes. But it's not terribly important—not at all important between good friends.

From the ages of twelve, fourteen and sixteen, every girl should be encouraged not only in cleanliness of complexion, but in the little niceties of careful grooming the finger nails, proper care of the lips, so they won't chap, and more than a passing look at the hair. And a little powder will help, too.

Smart summer resorts this year are seeing more of white silk tennis dress a and less of shorts for the player. Wonder if th tide is turning back toward the 1890's?

For a summery table, try a net tablecloth with a wide ruffled flounce and a centerpiece of summer flowers.

If you'd have your eyes appear more wide-set, put eye shadow only under the outer edges of the eyes, and mascara only on the outer lashes —and none near the bridge of the nose.

The primitive way of making butter was to swing it to and fro in skin or leather bags.

Though Paris still sets a great many of women's styles, the movies have a huge influence too, and they are not likely to take up the recent Paris vogue for intricate draping, because Hollywood insists on glorifying the feminine figure.

A delicious parfait: beat the yolks of four eggs slightly and pour on a cup of hot maple syrup slowly, stir it over hot water until thick. Cool and add a pint of cream, whipped, beat until stiff and turn into freezing trays and freeze three or four hours.

Do you know someone with perfect teeth? Who's never been to a dentist except for cleaning? Heredity and diet for mother and child were evidently right in such cases Calcium and phosphorus and vitamin D are the important elements in the diet. You and your children can get them all in specially treated milk in most large cities these days.

Judging from the bathing suits of today, posture is increasingly important to beauty. A well formed back, for example, is as important an item on the beach as the correct weight for your height . . . And if you have children who aren't sitting and standing properly, correct them yourself, or if that won't do, see a doctor, for health as well as beauty frequently depends on it.

Linen slacks for beach wear are being shown in seven-eighths length these days, and built up high at the waist.

SURVEY MADE OF CHEMICAL WEED KILLERS

The sixth of a series of studies dealing with weed research and control has been issued by the Northwest Grain Dealers' Association. This pamphlet deals with chemical weed killers, and is the result of research conducted by Dr. G. P. McRostie, Professor of Agronomy, Uni-Tildesley, M.Sc., Assistant on Weed Research, and financed by line elevator companies.

The pamphlet deals with proper chemicals to use in weed destruction. It outlines methods of mixing to avoid burning body and clothing. Manner of spraying, when to apply, and effect on grain yields are set forth.

Summarizing the results of the survey, the pamphlet states:

1. The use of chemical weed killers is only justified where cultivation cannot be properly done, or where it has proven ineffective.

2. Some annual weeds can be successfully and profitably controlled in growing crops.

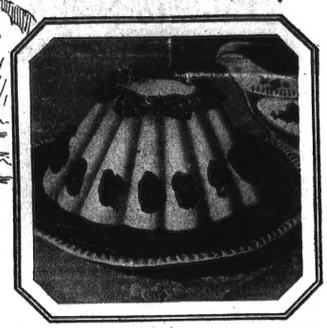

3. The profitable use of chemical for the control of perennial weeds is confined almost entirely to the treatment of rather small patches.

4. Fertilizers, properly applied, are a material aid in lessening the weed menace in the common cereal crops.

Copies of this booklet can be obtained, free of charge, from any line elevator agent, or by writing to the Northwest Grain Dealers' Association, Winnipeg.

FAMOUS ENGLISH "BONE CHINA" ON DISPLAY

At the Wainwright Studio this week can be seen a display of the famous English "Bone China", which for the past two hundred years has stood paramount among the connoisseurs of this art.

As the name implies, this line of goods is made primarily of animal bone, imported from the Argentine. Ox and sheep bone is most in demand for this purpose by the makers. The bone is reduced to ash by calcination, and forms about 50 per cent of the final content of the china, the balance consisting of Cornish clay and other ingredients such as fieldspar and flint; the clay giving elasticity and the other parts producing the flux for the combination.

The latest pattern in this "Bone China" is being shown in town in a charming and dainty old "needlework" motif, and to lovers of the "graceful hostess table" should make quite an appeal.

DRUG ADDICTS

America is a nation of drug-addiction. I do not mean opium or narcotic addiction. But I do mean that we are habitual drug users just the same.

For instance, alcohol. I believe we have a hundred alcohol addicts to one opium user. From the old grandma who sips her daily tonic containing alcohol, to the inebriate who takes his daily libations of "white mule"—all Americans use alcohol to some degree and its subtle effect on the human system often leads to addiction.

I suppose there are not figures enough to number our tobacco users, all the most profound addicts. Tobacco contains a powerful drug, nicotine, which steals into the human system producing the most intense desire. It is appalling that so many children, young boys and girls, are becoming tobacco users. I have not room here to say more of that.

And you who lingered long over your cups, you tea and coffee fiends. You are drug-addicts, every one of you. There is a record of a lady and her grown daughter who together consumed 42 cups of strong tea daily. Both were nervous wrecks. I myself knew a laborer who boasted of drinking seven cups of coffee at each meal. So far as I know he kept it up and lived to old age.

All these people were unmistakable drug addicts. They were distinctly within the danger-zone.

Let me say this of alcohol, tobacco, tea and coffee. All of them, if used within the strict limit of temperature, are distinct benefactors of the human race. It is only EXCESS that kills. Bear this in mind always.

CENTENARY OF CANADIAN RAILROADING IN 1936

MONTREAL—Plans for the celebration of the centenary of Canadian railroading on July 21, 1936, are being developed by the Canadian Railway Centenary Committee. The first train to operate in Canada ran from Laprairie to St. Johns in the Province of Quebec on July 21, 1836. It is proposed to build an exact replica of the original train; all Canadian trains will be expected to carry suitable signs and at night beacon fires will be lit along the railroad.

in Canada during the month of June, 1935, was 3,312,501 lbs.

EASY TO MAKE

Pattern 8513: Shirtwaist dresses are so popular that every woman must have several; and one with its own little cape is as smart as can be. Also a short cape makes one look very young.

So here is a style with chic and youthful appeal. The shirtwaist closing of the dress extends down the entire front and gives one an opportunity for stunning button trimming. The cape is separate and the dress is complete and practical in itself. It is finished off with a small collar which ties in a loose knot, a welcome variation from the collar and bow or collar and scarf.

This would be effective in a light printed silk, with dark contrast as suggested in the sketch.

FALL RYE FOR PASTURE

Fall rye, at the Dominion Experimental Station, Rosthern, Saskatchewan, has proved to be one of the best crops for late fall and early spring pasture. It is an ideal fall pasture for ewes and young stock, and for the same class of stock early in the spring. It has given very good results during the spring and early summer months, being especially suitable for sows and litters and other breeding stock. Milch cows should be pastured on it very sparingly, however, as the milk and cream may develop an offensive flavor. All classes of livestock appear to relish winter rye in the fall and early spring, but it quickly loses its palatability when it attains the shot blade stage of maturity.

It usually comes in head in the latter part of May, and it is usually more profitable to pasture the field closely in the spring, plough about the first week in June, and seed to some other crop such as an oat greenfeed, barley, or an oat-rye mixture, if more pasture is needed.

For fall pasture, it has been found best, at the Rosthern Experimental Station, to seed about July 15 to August15, and not to pasture too closely before freeze-up. If the crop is not to be pastured in the fall, it should not be sown until September 15, because, when too heavy a growth develops, winter-killing is greater.

Seeded at the rate of 1½ bushels per acre for wheat, on the grain drill has been found heavy enough. Dakold fall rye is one of the most hardy varieties tested at the Rosthern Station.

QUALITY IN BINDER TWINE

The binder twine now being used to harvest Canada's crop comes from a number of sources. Canadian made twine supplies a large part of the domestic demand and considerable quantities made in the Dominion are exported to other countries, but, binder twine from several other countries has come to share the Canadian market. The greater part of the importations into Canada are from Great Britain, Ireland and Holland and in recent years small quantities have also been received from Belgium and Germany.

The law requires that each ball of binder twine sold in Canada shall bear a label stating the number of feet of twine per pound in the ball, whether 500, 550, 600 or 650 feet. This is a case where quantity is the estimate of quality. Inspectors of the Dominion Department of Agriculture Seed Branch inspect Canadian made twine at the places of manufacture and imported twine at storage warehouses, and by a system of measurement and calculation determine the actual number of feet per pound as compared with the length guaranteed.

Results of binder twine inspection in recent years have shown a steady improvement in both Canadian and imported twine used in Canada. More than three hundred samples were taken of the twine distributed in Canada in 1934, the tests of which showed that 47 per cent had actually more twine to the pound than was guaranteed and 14 per cent had exactly the length guaranteed. The remainder of the samples had some shortage which was inconsiderable in most cases and only 2.5 per cent had a shortage of over 5 per cent, which is the limit of shortage allowed by law.

Tensile strength in binder twine is not subject to legal control. Inspectors, however, give some attention to this factor but it is now seldom that a sample is found in which the tensile strength is too weak for ordinary binding.

RUST RESISTANT WHEAT AVAILABLE FOR 1937

The return to the Prairie Provinces this year in epidemic proportions of that dread scourge of the wheat grower, namely, wheat stem rust, is focussing attention on the work which has been in progress during recent years in connection with the production of varieties of wheat which are capable of resisting this disease.

A question, which the farmers in the most seriously affected areas are asking with evident interest and concern is: When will seed of this new wheat be available? The answer is that several varieties of rust resistant wheat are being tested in different points in Western Canada, what are so far believed to be the best two or three varieties are being increased as rapidly as possible and according to L. H. Newman, Dominion Cerealist for the Dominion Experimental Farms, it is reasonable to expect that by the spring of 1937, there may be available several thousand bushels of seed, in lots of two to four bushels to each farmer.

Exacting tests for milling and baking have been made of the best varieties of rust resistent wheat that have so far been evolved as a result of about 20 years of research work started by the Dominion Department of Agriculture in 1916 at the Dominion Experimental Farms at Brandon, Man., and Indian Head, Sask., and subsequently carried on at the Dominion Rust Research Laboratory at Winnipeg and at other points under the auspices of the Associate Committee on Field Crop Diseases, the members of which are representative of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, the National Research Council, the Faculties of Agriculture of the western Universities and the provincial Department of Agriculture. The results of the tests so far have amply fulfilled the expectations of the plant breeders.

THE BOOK

the first Book of which each, "The Holy Bible," and which contains Magnificent Treasures

by BRUCE BARTON

"The Holy Bible"

OUR DEBT TO JEROME

The only way to find out who wrote a particular book of the Bible or at what time, is by a study of the book itself. For instance, when we read the first verses of Luke and find that they were written to a man named Theophilus, and then read the opening verses of Acts and find that they also are addressed to a man of the same name and that they refer to a "former treatise," we at once ask ourselves whether the two books were not written by the same man. It is a reasonable and proper question. In one way it makes no difference who wrote Luke and Acts. Both books are of more value to us when we find that the same man did write both.

So it is the function of the higher critics to find out so far as they can the date and authorship and relations of the books each to the other. These critics pay little attention to other treatises; their study is the Bible itself. They are a reverent body of men. The Biblical critic to whom the world owes most is Jerome, who lived in the fourth century. By that time Latin had come to be the language of the western church and there were Latin translations of the Bible, but poor ones, made from very faulty manuscripts.

Jerome was an eminent scholar, and to become still more proficient he went to Palestine and lived for a long time in Bethlehem. Two good women, a mother and her daughter, went with him; the mother, being a widow and possessed of wealth, furnished money and looked after his health. You can imagine what pious gossips said about that arrangement. But Jerome kept on. Their reputations suffered but they probably saved Jerome's life to complete its great work. He took the oldest Hebrew and Greek manuscripts he could find; he made himself a thorough master of both languages, and after years and years of lonely toil he gave the church the vulgate, the translation of the Bible into the "vulgar" or Latin tongue. It is the translation which the Roman Catholic Church uses to-day, and it is a noble production.

Was he thanked for his work? On the contrary, he was denounced for tampering with the word of God. His name was a byword and a reproach. But Jerome did not suffer in silence. He hit back at his critics telling them exactly what they were. He called them "fools" and "stupids" and "ignoramuses" and "blind asses" To the end of his life he was cursed and denounced and called an athiest and a heretic and a whoremonger. Meantime, by its sheer excellence his work was gaining readers in every generation. He had to wait a thousand years for his complete vindication — when the Council of Trent accepted his translation as authoriative.

IMMUNITY

Every capacity which living matter possesses has come to it through inheritance. The human body has an inborn or inherited capacity to defend itself against disease. This capacity must be developed before it can become powerful enough to be an effective force in the preservation of life and health through the prevention of disease.

We start out into life with a store of protective substance carried over from our mothers. These are gradually lost. When the child is six months old, he is entirely dependent upon the capacities of his own body for protection against disease.

The body of the child has inherent capacities for defence, but the particular defensive forces which are used to meet the attack of any one kind of disease germs are not produced until the body is stimulated to do so by the presence of these same germs in the body.

This would be all very well, but only too often the attack of the disease germs is so severe that the body is overwhelmed before it has time to develop the strength of its defensive forces. Nature does succeed in building up protection or immunity, but the price is much suffering, a great deal of permanent damage and many deaths.

Nature devised as a protective process the development of immunity by the production of protective substances in the body. Science has sought to secure immunity by stimulating the production of protective substances and consequent immunity while avoiding the risk of life involved in nature's process.

The aim of preventive medicine is to build up the undeveloped protective forces of the body before the body is attacked; then, if disease germs do gain entrance to the body, they will be dissipated at once and no harm will result.

Diphtheria immunization means that, by the injections of diphtheria toxoid, a harmless substance, the body is stimulated to produce and keep on hand a quantity of diphtheria antitoxin. Diphtheria germs do their damage by the toxin or poison which they produce in the body. This toxin is neutralized by antitoxin, and the body which contains diphtheria antitoxin is protected or immune as far as the disease, diphtheria, is concerned.

What science has done is to use nature's way while removing the dangers which were associated with the process when it was left to nature. Again, man has, in the use of his intelligence, come to understand the laws of nature, and then, building upon this knowledge, has been able to fight, with success, such a persistent and dreaded foe as diphtheria.

Are your children immune against diphtheria?

8. VISION IN SHOOTING

HERE is some valuable advice from shotgun experts, which will be welcomed both by novices and shooters who are anxious to improve their marksmanship. Russell W. Elliott, Manager of Elliott's Shooting Park at Kansas City, Missouri, writes: "There is probably no phase of clay target shooting instruction in which the novice receives so much misinformation as that pertaining to the use of both eyes. The well-meaning expert who shoots with both eyes open without knowing how or why will invariably tell the newcomer in the game that he should also do so, without first enquiring about the relative strength of the novice's eyes.

"The theory of shooting with both eyes open is that it permits quicker vision of the target when it comes into view, but contrary to general belief, the left eye does not aid in the actual pointing of the shotgun after the target is seen. With a right-handed shooter, the right eye directs the gun, and it must be as strong or stronger than the left eye to prevent cross vision when shooting with both eyes open. A man whose left eye is the stronger should shoot from the left shoulder if he expects to make consistently good scores when shooting with both eyes open.

"It has not been my experience that both eyes being open is a material asset in single target shooting, as there is plenty of time for the one-eyed shooter to pick up the target and break it before it is out of range. However, when shooting doubles in Skeet or in the field, where a slow shooter is at a disadvantage, then the larger field of vision to pick up the first glimpse of the target gives the man who uses both eyes a material advantage."

L. G. Sheppard, of the Ontario Hunters' Game Protective Association, St. Catharines, Ont., sends a simple method by which the beginner can determine which of his eyes is the stronger:

"To find out which eye is the stronger," he writes, "take a finger ring and hold it at arm length, look through it with both eyes open at some object twenty feet away. Then close the left eye. If the right eye still sees the object through the ring which has not been moved the right eye is the stronger and may be trusted to align the gun and the shooter can keep both eyes open."

This is No. 8 of a series of 12 articles on Skeet Shooting. Cut it out. When all have been clipped, you will have a complete write-up of this sportsman's sport which is rapidly becoming the vogue across Canada.

USE YOUR FRANCHISE

Tomorrow (Thursday) the electorate of Alberta are asked to decide who shall represent them in the provincial parliament and it is hoped that each and every one will use their franchise. It is only by a general response at the polls that the tempo of the people can really be analysed; perhaps, in this election more than any previous in recent times.

This is the first occasion that electors have been confronted with so many parties seeking endorsation. In Wainwright constituency there are four (alphabetically) Conservative, Liberal, Social-Credit and U.F.A.-C.C.F. On this account it behooves one and all to exercise their franchise at the polls.

THE HORSES WERE WINDED

A story out of the past has interested children in many generations. It has to do with a fire, an old-fashioned fire engine, a pair of winded horses and some sensible people.

When the fire alarm was turned in about four in the morning, the dapple grey horses pranced from their stalls into their places. The hanging harness was let down and clamped tight. Down the street they went clickety-clack! clickety-clack! over the frosty cobble stones. The siren screamed and the bell rang. Sparks flew in showers from the engine's stack. It was a long run to the fire. On arriving at the scene, it was discovered that the nearest water supply was inadequate. However, there was plenty of water a-top a nearby hill. But, the horses were winded, their legs trembled. The chief ordered the horses unhitched and called for volunteers. Ropes were fastened to the fire engine truck. Some men took hold of them. Others grabbed the tongue. Still others got ready to push. At a given signal every man did his bit and soon the engine stood beside the deep well on top of the hill. It wasn't long before a stream of water was spitting at that fire as effectively as a tiger cat at a terrier. The fire went out.

When the people of Wainwright are confronted with a common danger they work together and willingly follow leadership. On the other hand, is it not well to remember that it is the "ever-lastin' teamwork of every bloomin' soul" that makes school, church, lodge, scout or other organizations and community projects succeed?

REAL HOME LIFE

Better than 52 per cent of all American families live in 16,407 towns of 10,000 population or under. There you will find real people; sincere, home loving, intelligent and appreciative of all the arts. Nearly 96 per cent of small town homes are one and two family dwellings while only 63 per cent of big city homes are that way. What is home without a spacious backyard where flowers can grow and children can romp as compared with a cement driveway and the unnatural restrictions of dangerous city streets. Truly, the small town is the real place to establish a home and to raise children under those wholesome influences which are so much needed in business and professions.

The small town housewife and mother prefers, intelligently, to establish social leadership through possession of items having to do with the home rather than to place undue emphasis upon unsound pleasures and ephemeral fashions, as do many of her city cousins. She is real, earnest, sound and wise.

SHOPPING WITH NON-NEGOTIABLE CERTIFICATES

(By W. H. Collier, B.A.)

Under his particular kind of Social Credit Mr. Aberhart tells us that money is to be done away with. All business is to be carried on by means of credit.

In buying and selling of all goods and services only a non-negotiable certificate is to pass from the purchaser to the vendor. No money is to be used. On page 49 of the Manual he carefully explains that his non-negotiable certificate is not designed to circulate as money or as a substitute for money, because that would be contrary to the B.N.A. Act. A non-negotiable certificate is not to be thought of as money because it would be illegal to use it as money. It can be used only as an acknowledgement of a debt. A non-negotiable certificate can be used only once and must then be taken to the 'Credit House' before any credit can pass from the buyer of any goods to the seller. Each purchase requires a new and separate certificate.

On page 21 of the Manual Mr. Aberhart says, "Salaries and wages for work done will be paid as now, but in credit, not money."

Again on page 23 he further explains that all Basic Dividends, salaries, wages on incomes from whatever source will be paid in credit, not money.

The operation of Social Credit, according to Mr. Aberhart, is very simple. Each citizen, a man woman over 21, will be given a Credit book and also a book of blank non-negotiable certificates. The Manual says:

"When the citizen desires to purchase goods or services he will merely fill out a blank non-negotiable certificate for the amount of the goods or services secured by him, and, after signing it, pass it over to the party with whom he is dealing."

The vendor of the goods will then take the certificate that he has received to the Credit House Branch where the amount will be credited to the buyer. Simple, isn't it? Why handle the filthy lucre, money?

Once a month each citizen will take his Credit Book to the Branch Credit House where a credit entry of his Basic Dividend will be made in it.

Any non-negotiable certificates that he may hold for wages earned on for sales of wheat, eggs, cream, chickens, cattle or other products that he has made will also be entered on the credit side of this book and all the non-negotiable certificates that he has issued during the month will be entered on the debit side. Simply book-keeping entries, that's all.

At Wainwright there would probably be a Branch Credit House to look after the credit needs of all the citizens living within a radius of, say, 15 miles of Wainwright. At present the Bank of Montreal has a branch bank at Wainwright which costs about seven hundred dollars a month to operate. It has a staff of five people.

As every citizen over 18 years of age would have a separate account in the Branch Credit House under Social Credit there would be fully five times as many accounts as is now in the bank at Wainwright. And as every purchase of goods or services requires a separate non-negotiable certificate and as each of these certificates will have to be recorded in the Branch Credit House it would require a staff of twenty people or more to operate it. The expense would be more than two thousand dollars per month.

Shopping With Non-Negotiable Certificates

A farmer sells a load of wheat to the elevator at Fabyan and receives a non-negotiable certificate. It is not money. He cannot buy a paper of pins with it. He must take it to the Credit House Branch at Wainwright and have it entered to his credit before he can buy anything with the proceeds from his load of wheat.

A farmer cannot sell a cow to a neighbor and buy a horse from another neighbor with the same non-negotiable certificate. Two separate ones must be used and each taken to the Credit House Branch for entry.

What fun a man and his wife will have on a little holiday trip to Banff. They need no money. Each has a book of non-negotiable certificates. They eat three times a day, generally in a different town or city for meal. They shop at several stores in Edmonton and Calgary. They buy gas at many different service stations on the way. On a two-weeks' trip they will make full a hundred purchases, each with a non-negotiable certificate and these will all have to be returned to the Branch Credit House at Wainwright.

How About Identification?

Under our present system of money cheques on the bank at Wainwright will not be accepted in the stores at Edmonton unless they are "Marked" or unless the maker of the cheque is "identified". We are all aware that quite a few cheques prove to be rubber and they bounce back with NFS on them.

Under Social Credit you do not suppose that there would be any rubber non-negotiable certificates bouncing back with NSC (not sufficient credit) on them, do you?

How About a Little Stamp Tax

The Dominion Government could get about ten times the revenue that it gets now from cheques by requiring a small three-cent stamp to be put on each non-negotiable certificate. And what government is not looking for a new source of revenue?

§ WEDDING BELLS §

SIMPSON—REIGHLEY

(Red Deer Advocate)

One of the prettiest of the midsummer weddings, and one of very wide interest, was solemnized at four o'clock on July 24th, when Gladys Alberta, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Reighley of Leslieville, became the bride of Mr. James Gordon Simpson, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Simpson of Sylvan Lake, Rev. R. S. Stevens officiating.

Preparations had been made to have the ceremony performed on the beautiful lawn at the bride's home, but owing to a heavy rain storm the nuptial knot was tied under an archway indoors, where pink and white streamers and a profusion of flowers made a beautiful setting. The bride who looked charming, was gowned in shell pink georgette, its simple lines broken only by designs of shearing, entered on the arm of her father to the strains of the Wedding March from Lohengrin played by Miss Jean Simpson, sister of the groom. Miss Bertha Reighley, attired in pink crepe, acted as bridesmaid for her sister. Shower bouquets and large picture hats completed their ensembles. Mr. Kenneth Simpson supported the groom.

After the ceremony, the guests, numbering about thirty-five of the immediate friends and relatives of the contracting parties sat down to a buffet luncheon centred by a three tier wedding cake. During the afternoon, Mrs. Stevens sang sweetly, "The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden." The large array of handsome gifts and telegrams of congratulations testified to the popularity of the young couple. The bride has been for some time stenographer of the Bank of Montreal, Red Deer, while the groom is accountant of the Bank of Montreal at Wainwright. The groom's gifts to the bridesmaid and pianist were brooch sets, and to the best man a gold watch chain.

The young couple left amidst showers of good wishes, rice and confetti on a two-week motor trip to the Coast by way of the States. The bride's going-away costume being an apple green ensemble with hat and accessories to match. On their return they will make their home in Wainwright.

The groom is a member of one of the best known families of Sylvan Lake and through his work on the inspectors' staff of the bank has a wide circle of acquaintances throughout the province. The bride is one of Red Deer's most charming and popular girls. She has been active in tennis and badminton and she will have the warmest of good wishes for her future happiness.

Jasper Park Golf Tourney Attractive

Never before in the history of Jasper golf has there been more interest than there is this year in the Tenth Annual Totem Pole tournament to be played here September 1st to 7th. Practically every city represented last year will be in again, with a great many registrations already made at the secretary's office.

The tournament will start off with the Men's Handicap against Par the first day. On Monday the qualifying rounds for both ladies and men will be played and flight play will follow. By the use of a special system an extra day of competitive play has been arranged. Concurrently with the qualifying round the high-ly competitive International Team Matches are played and this competition has always proved one of the features of the tournament.

Friday morning the ladies' finals are all played and the mixed foursome, a very popular feature, is played in the afternoon. On Saturday the Totem Pole championship and the men's flight finals are played, with the Totem Pole match scheduled for 36 holes. Saturday afternoon the Ladies' Handicap Match against Par is played and later, in front of the Lodge, in a most picturesque setting with Lac Beauvert as a background, the prizes will be presented by Hon. W. L. Walsh, Lieutenant Governor of Alberta.

The golf course is in excellent condition and offers a perfect test of good golf. A feature is the varied program which proves as popular for the high handicap player as it does with those who can flirt with par.

The DIVORCE COURT MURDER

by MILTON PROPPER

SYNOPSIS—Barbara Keith, wife of a prominent Philadelphia business man, is murdered as she waits in a side room to testify in the divorce case of Rowland vs. Rowland She was to have testified for the husband, a friend, who was defendant in action . . . Detective Tommy Rankin is assigned to the case from police headquarters . . . His preliminary investigation disclosed that both Mr. and Mrs. Rowland had gathered evidence against the other of infidelity . . . The will of Mrs. Rowland's first husband directed her lawyer brother Mr. Willard, to handle the estate until she remarried when the new husband was to come into control. Detective Rankin finds motives and the evidence of guilt for the murder of Mrs. Keith, leading to the doors of virtually all of the principals involved. These principals are, the two Rowlands, Mr. Willard, Mr. Hugh Campbell, paramour of Mrs. Rowland, and his underworld confederates . . . NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

The detective could not decide whether to believe the story or not.

"Do you know whether Mrs. Keith ever visited Allerton, Indiana?" Abruptly Rankin shifted the subject.

The other shook his head. "Allerton? Certainly not in the four years since we have met; before that she may have been there. She never mentioned it . . . Why do you ask?"

"I found an empty bottle with an old label from a hospital in that town in her medicine closet. It had contained pyramidon."

Rankin bent toward him to emphasize the importance of his next question.

"Isn't it a fact, Mr. Keith, that in spite of your liberal allowance and income, your wife was always pressed for funds?"

Mortimer Keith looked startled. "How could you guess that, Rankin?" he exclaimed. "It's true she worried about money, and often approached me for more, for charities and clothes. Once I questioned her about it, and she made some vague excuse about losing it in stocks."

"Perhaps this will explain her expenditures," Rankin said, "these check-stubs and canceled checks."

As he studied them, Mr. Keith's lips tightened into a formidable line, and his eyes flashed in features darkened by a swift anger.

The implied accusation brought Campbell forward in his chair, in a swift burst of anger.

"Steady payments like this for two years," he cried harshly, at last, 'as if she were being blackmailed to prevent me from learning some secret about her!"

"They certainly suggest that," Rankin said, in disappointed tones. "You had no knowledge of them or to whom or for what reason she drew them?"

"No, this is my first inkling of them."

"Were you aware, sir, that Mrs. Keith would be a witness in the Rowland divorce suit in Mr. Dawson's office, yesterday?"

Mr. Keith shook his head. "Not until I read where she met her death."

"Had you any idea," Rankin asked, "how she happened to accompany young Rowland, two weeks ago, and be in a position to give evidence for him?"

"I still don't understand how she ever permitted herself to become involved in such a vulgar public scandal!" the manufacturer rasped out.

"Did you know Mrs. Keith was going out that Wednesday night at all?"

"Yes, she was to visit her physician, who attends her when her headaches become particularly vicious, Dr. Anton Brantman on Pine Street. I didn't pay any attention to her when she left or returned home."

"Then, Mr. Keith, what was your connection with the Rowland divorce action?"

At the abruptness with which the detective shot this question the other gazed at him in perplexity and surprise.

"My connection?" he repeated wonderingly. "I don't follow you, Rankin; I haven't the slightest interest in it."

Rankin's voice rang with the vigor he put into his unexpected offensive.

"In that case," he demanded, "what were you doing at Sunset Inn, the evening of February 1st—when Mrs. Rowland discovered her husband in compromising relations with her secretary there?"

If it was Tommy Rankin's intention to startle the manufacturer by his sudden query, he succeeded admirably.

"How in the world did you find that out?" he finally asked in a dry voice.

Rankin saw no harm in answering. "It came out at the hearing that you reached the Inn just after Mrs. Rowland's party and witnessed the interruption of her husband's affair."

"Well, it . . . all happened quite accidentally . . . I had no warning of what was happening," the other floundered. "I was driving to New York alone that night, and when I reached Quakertown, I decided to sleep there because it was so late. I had left Philadelphia at about . . ."

Obviously he was stalling for time. "That won't wash, Mr. Keith!" the detective answered curtly. "You surely don't hope to persuade me your presence was only a coincidence?"

Mr. Keith compressed his lips. "Yes, of course that's ridiculous. The truth is, I have no explanation to offer; I can't tell you why I went there."

It was Rankin's turn to be taken aback, and he stared incredulously, as though he had not heard aright.

"You can't tell me, Mr. Keith?" he said harshly. "You mean you won't?"

"Have it any way you like, Rankin," his opponent returned, firmly. "It concerns me alone and can't possibly be of interest to the authorities. It is a private matter I prefer not to disclose."

"Mr. Keith," Rankin cried sharply, "do you realize what your refusal means? Nothing is private in a murder case; and I am investigating the murder of some one near to you —your wife."

The manufacturer winced. "If it had any relation to the crime at all, I promise you I wouldn't hesitate to speak out, Rankin."

"I'm the best judge of what is pertinent to the case and what isn't Mr. Keith."

But Mortimer Keith shook his head. "I'm sorry I can't oblige," he said more gently.

The detective had to acknowledge defeat in his effort to discover the secret of Mr. Keith's visit to Sunset Inn. The man stood clearly within his rights in not answering.

Leaving Cottman on guard, the detective returned to Headquarters.

"That fellow Campbell Gordon's been hunting has shown up, Tommy," the captain announced. "He came in and asked for you of his own accord twenty minutes ago."

Rankin began by ignoring the hand Campbell proffered, and the visitor flushed.

"Sit down, Campbell," he invited blandly. "I've often wanted to meet you; considering our mutual interests, it's strange we haven't done so before."

Campbell set aside his cane. "Yes, it is," he agreed. "I might return the compliment, Rankin; you're to be congratulated on your splendid reputation. It's a privilege to know you."

"I had expected to hear from you before this," the detective continued. "It's been in all the papers that we wanted to communicate with you."

"That's what really brought me in," Campbell returned easily. "I happened to be called hastily to the country, where there were no newspapers. I spent the night on the Perkiomen Creek, at the cottage of my friend Nick Alberti, who manages the Organdy Club."

Rankin spoke casually. "That was where so much of the trouble began, wasn't it, Campbell? When you and Mrs. Adele Rowland spent a night there, two weeks ago?"

At the deliberate provocation the racketeer compressed his lips resentfully and his eyes flashed; but with an effort he held his peace.

"What about that phone call in the lawyer's office?" Rankin chaltout 'Oh, my God!' and 'You fool!' That didn't mean very pleasant news. You were alarmed enough to rush out quickly to . . . well, be on hand yourself and then leave the city."

Again Campbell's features hardened. "You haven't a single fact to prove any connection with Mrs. Keith. It's no use, Rankin; you can't show I had knowledge of her death before today, or expect me to admit anything you can use."

"At least you have no objection to telling me who phoned you," Rankin suggested.

"Oh, but I certainly have. That's my private affair."

Abruptly the detective shifted his attack. "If I'm not mistaken you reached Mr. Dawson's office yesterday before Mrs. Keith's arrived with her escort."

"No, I wasn't there then," Campbell corrected him. "I followed them by a few minutes it must have been almost twenty to three; and they had already gone into the library to wait."

"Mrs. Keith chose to stay in the inner office, fifteen-o-five, where she could be alone," Rankin stated, "and you were aware of that; in fact, Mrs. Rowland joined you from the library to tell you that." His tone became hostile. "Just before she entered fifteen-o-five herself, to unlock the hall door."

The implied accusation brought Campbell forward in his chair, in a swift burst of anger.

"So that's what you're getting at!" he said, through his teeth. "You'll claim next I committed the murder myself! Damn it, Rankin, be careful with your charges; you might have the unpleasant job of trying to prove them. I was in the main office during the time she was killed."

"So you know when that happened?" the detective observed dryly.

"And why not?" the visitor demanded wrathfully. "It's in all the papers that she died between half-past two and three o'clock."

"Well, what about the time before you arrived two-thirty-eight — or after you left That was at two-fifty-six; you still had four minutes leeway. And the whole business could be accomplished in hardly more than a minute. Mrs Rowland had unlocked the door from the corridor and pulled the curtains; it was only necessary to enter fifteen-o-five and close the windows, chloroform Mrs. Keith and then open them again."

Excited, Campbell appeared ready to blurt out a refutation, but caught himself, in a desperate attempt to regain his equanimity.

"Well, what of that?" He spoke more calmly. "It's all words, Rankin, nothing more; you've no foundation or confirmation of any of these suppositions. It's ridiculous for me to take them at all seriously."

Disappointed at his control, Rankin played his trump card, his unwavering gaze fixed on the other

"Campbell," he demanded slowly, "where can I find Mitch Riley? I think he could help me and I would like to have a short conversation with him."

At last he had penetrated Campbell's vigilant guard. Startled and furious, a cold rage leapt to his eyes in which the detective recognized amazement, shock and, what was most significant, fear.

He could not keep a strained timbre from his voice. "Mitch Riley? Oh, yes, he's one of Nick's friends from New York, isn't he, Rankin?"

"Yes, of Alberti's, Dutch Sykes and plenty others I needn't mention. Yesterday afternoon, he was in the office where Mrs. Keith died; he considerately left his fingerprints on the table beside her And when I learn why he was there they are going to hang somebody, Campbell."

Campbell regained his composure. "No, I don't understand his presence, if he was really there. You'll have to scout around to his friends to account for it, Rankin. All I know is that I haven't laid eyes on him."

When the racketeer left Headquarters at the close of the interview, Smith, a plain-clothes man followed him.

LIBERTY'S CANADIAN HALL OF FAME No. 15

Inspector J. F. C. B. Vance is the name. Police sleuth extraordinary is the occupation. Vancouver, British Columbia, the habitat. Inventor of the most amazing instrument yet developed for crime detection, is his most distinguished accomplishment.

Inspector Vance, terror of criminals, the object of five deadly attacks by gangsters, has developed a "robot nose," called the Vancamoscope which identifies suspects by scent; threatens to convict them without a vestige of concrete evidence! Apparatus, a part of his $80,000 laboratory, is operated by spraying chemicals over the spot where the suspect may have stood. They rise into the instrument and strike a spectrum band. No two persons have the same spectrum record—hence identification as certain as fingerprints. Believes this scent guides bloodhounds.

Is now working on a theory that criminals can be detected by traces of nitrate left on the trigger of a gun by the thumb and forefinger. Has already discovered a way to determine how long an uncleaned murder weapon was fired. Is an expert on ballistic lore.

Was responsible for conviction of a man who robbed a beer parlor by tracing malic acid (a constituent of beer) to the coins in his pockets. Convinced a jury that a Yukon butcher had murdered a woman by identifying as human blood, a stain found on his boot.

John Vance is so feared in the northwest that criminals have surrendered and confessed when they knew he was on their trail. Yet for all his genius he draws only $318.75 month as salary. He is over fifty years old and, although a decidedly poor business man, still has hopes of making a fortune through a process he has developed, intended to make gasoline go thirty miles a gallon instead of eighteen.

Believes he will die a natural death although, bombs, vitriol, nitroglycerine and detonators have been used in his home to snuff out his earthly existence.

Doesn't like people to liken him to Philo Vance or other fictional sleuths.

THE PICTURE OF BROKEN-HEARTED JOSEPHINE

on the floor, her head on her, arm in a chair has gripped many hearts. Even Napoleon as he stands by the door to go seems to be touched almost to the point of reconsidering.

The depth of Josephine's disappointment will probably never be fully realized.

There is a thought in this which can be applied to some Canadian communities. Suicides among discouraged business men, hard-pressed by wholesalers, makes a tragic picture because their financial predicament was brought about by trusting old friends too long, who, when they got hold of some cash, spent it elsewhere.

NAPOLEON admitted before he died that his "truest friend was Josephine, his greatest error, her rejection."

Quite often now-a-days one hears people admitting that their best friend was the local merchant and one of their greatest errors was made in forsaking him to chase inferior goods at "bargain" prices here, there and elsewhere.

However, the merchants in Wainwright need not bid for sympathy. Low rents, inexpensive advertising and hard work make it possible for them on the whole, quality for quality to meet fair competition on a VALUE basis. It will pay you to read their ads in this issue of

Wainwright Star

This Week in Washington

Now that the Democratic Senators and Representatives have had a little time to examine the President's tax-the-rich proposal in all of its aspects, their inclination is to rush some sort of new tax bill through both Houses. The indication is that it will be just that—"some sort of a bill."

The leaders on both sides of the Capitol have no idea of making such a comprehensive revision of the estate, inheritance and income-tax laws as would be necessary if the purpose was to raise enough money to meet the budget deficit. About the best that could be expected from the drafts prepared by the Committee on Ways and Means would be enough additional revenue to take care of about one month's running expenses of the (Federal Government. It will however, be something which can be pointed to in the coming political campaigns as an earnest effort of the party's desire to bring about a more equitable distribution of wealth, and this political effect is what most of the boys on Capitol Hill are chiefly concerned about.

It is certain that nothing which Congress may do will go far enough to satisfy either the LaFollette Progressives, who have a plan for increasing income taxes all the way down the line, or the "share-the-wealth" group, headed by Senator Huey Long. The followers of these leaders, and several other less well organized radical elements, are again being taken seriously as political figures in next year's Presidental election.

Still Third Party Talk

Some observers here still insist that a radical third party movement is shaping up. Discounting the fact that politicians are inclined to become jittery on the slightest provocation, it is certain that some of Mr. Roosevelt's followers are showing signs of fear that such a radical movement will make headway, because of the impossibility of getting through both Houses a sufficient radical tax reform measure to satisfy any considerable proportion of discontented voters. Such a movement might draw upon the surplus of votes which the Democratic leaders hope will be cast for Mr. Roosevelt next year.

There is possibly even greater menace in a swing away from the Roosevelt Administration by Conservative Democratic leaders. Washington is beginning to regard it is a certainty that if Mr. Roosevelt is renominated, a Conservative Democratic ticket will be put in the field. Talk of candidates to head such a ticket is a matter of every day conversation. Former Governor Albert Ritchie of Maryland, and Lewis W. Dougias of Arizona, former Director of the Budget, are names most often heard.

All talk of a coalition party, combining Democrats with the Republican, has ceased. Republicans and Democratic Conservatives, however, are in entire harmony in efforts to bring about a situation which would result in Mr. Roosevelt's defeat. They will do all they can to encourage any radical movement which shows promise of developing into a third party, and, indeed, might help in getting a fourth or even a fifth party launched. Anything to split the Roosevelt vote is the political slogan of the Opposition.

G.O.P. Timber

Most of the talk about Republican candidates is in the nature of trial ballons. Names are suggested and the suggestors put their ears to the ground to listen for the popular reaction. Just now the man who is being thus promoted is Governor "Alf" Landon, of Kansas, whose chief claim to fame is that he has succeeded in balancing the Kansas State budget. Governor Landon is less well-known nationally than several of the others who are talked about as Republican Presidental timber.

Col. Frank Knox, publisher of The Chicago Daily News, seems to have a strong personal following which has grown up almost apontaneously and one learn the name of former Senator "Jimmy" Wadsworth, of New York, but it does not seem to arouse much enthusiasm in the west.

Among the undercurrents of political gossip is the suggestion—and it may be more than that—that business interests may be, or are being, organized to back the "safe" members of the House of Representatives for re-election and to attempt to put "safe" men into Congress in place of those whom business distrusts. This would be something of an innovation in a national political campaign.

The Members of The Aberhart Campaign

(Red Deer Advocate)

A new and unusual factor has been injected into this provincial campaign by Mr. Aberhart in his so-called Social Credit scheme. His use of the radio and his regimentation of his followers are somewhat foreign to Canadian political life. The refusal of many of his candidates to answer questions from the platform, the instructions to them not to engage in public debate nor to attend opposition meetings, and their almost fanatical devotion to their cause and their leader in many cases are new to us here. Their violent resentment of legitimate criticism and their wide-spread accusations of mud-slinging and unfair tactics on the part of their opponents, and their assumption in many cases that they have the only possible solution (?) for our present difficulties show the weakness of their case. Their complete disregard for the basic principles of social credit by declaring for a monthly dividend without any fixed base for it, such as the annual increment of the national assets, as suggested by Major Douglas in his evidence before the Macmillan Commission in England, and by taxing or levying for the funds to pay the dividend has alienated many strong social creditors. Real social credit is not based on taxation or levies such as Mr. Aberhart proposes.

History and economics are, for the most part, closed books to Mr. Aberhart's follower's otherwise their statements would hardly take in so much territory. Here is one: "Professors of economics are being hired to tell the people how and why it can not be done, but the people must remember that the whole background and philosophy of economics in the past and up to the present has been based on one foundation, and that foundation is Finance." Shades of Karl Marx! Another statement from the same source: "but they (the forces so strenuously opposing Social Credit will operate in the Province of Alberta, that it is quite constitutional under the terms of the BNA and Bank Acts, that the truth of all the statement which have been made from the public platforms by Social Credit speakers have been supported by actual facts" It is statements of this kind that convince level-headed people of the abysmal ignorance of some of the Aberhart propagandists. To say as this statement does that Mr. Aberhart's opponents know that "Social Credit" will operate in Alberta, that they know that it is quite constitutional under the BNA and Bank Acts, is directly contrary to the facts. Few even of Mr. Aberhart's followers, would go that length, but that is by no means the most extreme of the many wild statemens being made on behalf of the Aberhart plan. The appeal is being made on emotional grounds to those who are hard pressed and who, in many cases, have little knowledge of the powers and limitations of provincial government.

"COALS TO NEWCASTLE"

HALIFAX — Scientific progress seems to be upsetting a lot of commonly accepted phrases, at least that is the way it appears to work out in the case of the apply industry in the Maritime Provinces. "Carrying coals to Newcastle" is a familiar saying when one wants to convey a meaning of absurdity, but down in Berwick, Nova Scotia, a new process in dehydrating apples has been applied on a commercial scale and Nova Scotia is now sending dehydrated apples to British Columbia, according to the Industrial Department of the Canadian National Railways. Britian Columbia is itself a great apple growing province.
